Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 05 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Heavy snow parts of Scotland, milder and showery in south.

Today:
Heavy snow continuing for inland, upland parts of north and east Scotland, drifting in strong winds. Heavy rain for some central areas. Some fog and low cloud further south, followed by mix of bright intervals and showers; still fairly mild.

Tonight:
Further heavy snow for similar areas of Scotland. Wet for some central areas. Southern UK sees some areas of showery rain but drier, clearer gaps with patchy fog and frost.

Saturday:
Further snow across parts of Scotland, and increasingly some other northern and eastern areas later. Low cloud and showery rain affecting southern areas but a few brighter gaps. Turning colder.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Following a spell of snow in the southeast on Sunday, further snow showers are expected next week, most frequent in the east. Dry and bright in the west. Very cold.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.